WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our regular correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, June 22 d, 1888.

Senators Sherman, Allison, Hawley, Evarts, Edmunds and Ingalls have all been quietly attending to their usual duties in the Senate this week, not withstanding the fact that they have all been mentioned in connection with the presidential nomination. The very fact that they had been so mentioned, is probably what kept the most of those gentlemen away from the Chicago convention.

The Senate has passed a bill for the representation of the several Government departments at Columbus (Ohio) Centennial Exposition next September and October. The bill appropriates $40,000 to pay the expenses.

The Senate, notwithstanding that the large number of absentees and pairs left it without a quorum this week, succeeded in doing a heavy week's work on the routine measures, which could be put through without a division.

The Senate will take up the river and harbor bill next Monday. Senator Frye, on Wednesday, submitted his favorable report on the bill. The reports starts out by saying that the bill exceeds by $2,800,000 the largest appropriation ever made in a similar bill, but as no bill was passed last year, and as none is likely to be passed at the short session following the presidential election, this bill practically represents a period of three years on a basis of $7,000,000 a year, which is considerably less than the average expenditure of recent years. The first river and harbor appropriation was made in 1822, and was $22,700. Up to date the aggregate is $161,000,000. There is not one of the great maritime governments of the world that does not expend more in proportion to its rivers and seacoast harbors than we do. France and England both spend $20,000,000 annually. The report states that the commerce of our inland water-ways amount to twenty five or thirty thousand million dollars annually, and that its rapid increase of late years has been largely due to Government appropriations. It argues that the opening of new regions and the cheapening of transportation more than to justify the expenditure, and that 80 per cent of the money expended this way goes directly into the hands of the wage earners of the country, and is therefore, more fairly distributed and more quickly restored to circulation than through any other channel.

The action of the [Chicago Convention in allowing Dakota and Washington Territories the number of representatives in the Convention which they would be entitled to as States, meets with general commendation from Republicans here.

The action of the Democratic majority of the House in passing an amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, which would, if accepted by the Senate, result in stopping work upon the new Congressional library building until a new plan could be made and accepted, is generally condemned by the friends of progress and education as a step backward. The action is thoroughly in keeping with the record of the Democratic party, which is and has always been, opposed to anything calculated to diffuse knowledge and enlightenment among the people.

A little breeze was created in the House Wednesday by the Nebraska representatives, who denounced in bitter terms the special land agents sent out by the Interior Department. The debate was brought on by an item in the Sundry Civil appropriation bill, appropriating $100,000 for these agents. McShane favored a reduction of $50,000. He was opposed to putting money in the hands of these men, to procure false affidavits by bribery, and to persecute settlers instead of prosecuting fraud. Mr. Laird also knew of the nefarious operations of these agents, whose acts he considered outrageous and infamous.

Senator Frye on Wednesday presented to the Senate a petition from the "Constitutional Defense of America," against the ratification of the Fisheries Treaty. R.
